States of matter worksheet 4th grade pdf

Showing 1 - 10 of 17 View all Solid, Liquid or Gas? Budding scientists put their thought caps while working to connect and identify the states of matter in this second-grade science worksheet. Students will first determine whether each image is a solid, liquid or gas, then draw a line that connects similar states of matter. This worksheet of science will question the knowledge of the child of the different states of matter. . Practice the worksheet that identifies the phases of matter (solid, liquid, gas or plasma) with your class. This worksheet of physical science asks students to identify the phases of matter, classify substances and arrange information on a table. The matter is all around you. Material is anything made of atomsmolecules. The universe consists of matter and energy. The matter has mass and occupies space. Energy has no mass and does not occupy space. Energy moves matter. There are three main states of matter: Solid, liquid and gas. Solid • Solids have a defined shapeThe crutches are well packaged together • Solids are malleable, which means that they can be shaped in a new shape like clay • Solids can be elastic, which means they can be folded or twisted in a new shape and then return to the original shape as an elastic • Solids have very little energy •Examples: Rocks, ice, liquid books • Liquids do not have a defined form • Liquids take the form of the container that are in • molecules are not strictly packed • Liquids of a medium amount of energy •Examples: Wash, water, oil Gas • Gases do not have defined shape or volume • The molecules are very dispersed • Gases have a lot of energy The fourth state of matter is Plasma which is a special form of matter. This begins as a gas and then becomes ionized when atoms in a gas were subdivided into negative electrons free float and positive ions. The ions are atoms that lost the electrons and are left with a positive electrical charge. Lightning, fluorescent bulbs and neon signs are examples of plasma. Think about it! Here are examples of what atoms due in each of the three states of matter. What's the difference? What do you expect to change them?
